

ABSTRACT

A method of automatic human identification includes matching an image of a subject's ear against a database of images of ears from identified people to identify the subject.